

The Two Doves

A young boy was sitting on a hill, he became enthralled with all that was about him. The majesty of setting sun, the earth and all its greenness, he heard the song of life and was filled with the pure joy of creation. He became aware of the universal oneness within himself and his joy was so great that his heart burst and two white doves were born. Their names were Yin and Yang.

They brought great love and wisdom with them and the whole world was lit up with their celestial light, and the peoples of the Earth saw the light and did not know its source. They said that it must be a portent from God of great and wonderful things to come for Earth and humankind.

The two doves stretched their consciousness throughout the Earth in order to learn how they could help the nationhood of humankind. They observed that the leaders of the people needed to learn of love in order to beget wisdom. They also observed that the world leaders were only reflectors of the people.

Thus the two doves determined to take human form. They became man and woman and they carried their message of eternal love to the four corners of the Earth. Wherever they went the purity of their love lit an answering light in the hearts of all they touched. They loved without conditions and without judgement and in time the reflection of their love and wisdom was mirrored in more hearts than we could count. And those whose hearts had been opened, in turn, by living the principle of love in every facet of their lives, showed others the way.

The torchbearers of the Earth are many as they unite visibly, invisibly linked up throughout this planet. There are so many prepared to help light the way, love-wisdom is the song. So take heart when the burden grows heavy, share in thought or word or action your song of love until it can be heard and seen and felt by all.

Margot Herbert